This article offers an overview of Photoshop's various features and how they can be used. The Difference Between Pixel and Image-Based Editing Photoshop deals with either pixels or images. It uses one or the other depending on how a file is saved or when an operation is performed. Pixels are used whenever users save images or edit them. If you don't save a Photoshop file in an image format, then a file would only be a collection of pixel data. The other type of edit, which is used when editing images, is converting pixels to images. When this happens, a pixel layer is converted to an image file. The process can also be referred to as creating a new image from a pixel layer or turning a pixel layer into an image layer. The Image Layers Format Photoshop makes layer-based editing simple. All the layers in a file are organized into groups based on their importance and all pixel layers, or the ones being converted to a new image, are added to a new layer that is part of a group that is separate from the remaining layers. Layer groups function to quickly organize and manage the layers in a Photoshop file. Types of Layers These types of layers are all elements of a Photoshop file: Pixel layers show an image's pixel data. A pixel layer shows the colors and pixel density of the pixels of an image. Slide 1 of 6 Scream you computer? A stuck key or a poor choice of keyboard can make the difference between a successful and a frustrating computer experience. Whether you have a new computer, an old computer or one that's reaching the end of its life, you need to choose the right keyboard. You'll enjoy using your computer more and miss fewer details on the screen when you use an efficient keyboard. It is the most important accessory you'll purchase. Try a new keyboard. Look for keyboards that have extra blank keys. The more blank keys you have, the more likely you will be to find the keys that may be sticking. Look for keys that have many small bumps on the keys. These are the keys that may be sticky. When choosing a new keyboard, look for one that has the proper number of keys. You don't want to use a keyboard with the extra keys because they'll get in the way. Consider a keyboard with a roller ball. These are special keys that roll smoothly over letters. They make typing feel more natural and efficient. Try a different keyboard. If you find that a keyboard you're using is not working well, or has some functional problems, you'll need to consider a new keyboard. Look for keyboards that have detachable parts. They are much easier to clean. There are keyboards that have a variety of extra features, such as memory, a large number of keys and/or detachable parts. In addition, consider a keyboard with a flat instead of a curved shape. Get a keyboard that is designed to fit your needs.

What's New in the Photoshop CC 2015?

Q: UITableViewCell with custom subclass not loaded properly I'm using a custom subclass of UITableViewCell as suggested in the Apple Developer Library and found here I modified the methods's body to use my custom subclass instead of the default one. I also modified the h file #import "CustomCell.h" #import "CustomCell.h" #import "AppDelegate.h" I'm trying to load the custom subclass on a UITableView for a UIPickerView just to make sure it's working. This is how I load the custom cell to the picker's cell: @implementation CustomPickerTableViewController @synthesize customPickerCell = customPickerCell; - (UITableViewCell *)tableView:(UITableView *)tableView cellForRowAtIndexPath:(NSIndexPath *)indexPath { if ([tableView isEqual:UITableView]) _customPickerCell = [tableView dequeueReusableCellWithIdentifier:@"customCell"]; else customPickerCell = (CustomPickerTableViewCell *) [tableView dequeueReusableCellWithIdentifier:@"customCell"]; [customPickerCell setCustomPickerCellView:picker]; // Configure the cell... return _customPickerCell; } For some reason, the cell's content doesn't show up and this is what I see inside the debugger: CustomPickerTableViewCell -(id)initWithStyle:(UITableViewCellStyle)style reuseIdentifier:(NSString *)reuseIdentifier { self = [super initWithStyle:style reuseIdentifier:reuseIdentifier]; if (self) { // Custom initialization } return self; } - (id)initWithCoder:(NSCoder *)aDecoder { self = [super initWithCoder:aDecoder1:
